Local Topics.

Mr. L. D. Brower, who has a homestead south, but is temporarily residing at Fernie, B.C., came down on Saturday for the purpose, as he informed us, of making further arrangements for improvement upon his claim preparatory to entering upon it for the winter. He was quite surprised to see the great improvement in the appearance of the crops around here, and mentioned especially their superiority over every crop this side of Pincher Creek. After closely observing and examining the soil west of Bow Island, he says he is more than ever convinced of the valuable nature of the land in this particular district.

We are informed by Mr. T. Spence that he was out last week discussing with the officials connected with the Southern Alberta Irrigation ditch the possibility of finding team work, and he was informed that all the teaming work was already contracted for although there would be plenty of work for teams after the ditch was surveyed. Men however, were still required. Mr. Spence left on Monday for Alix, from which place he had received a wire from the G.T.P. officials notifying him that there was plenty of work for teams up there.

H. W. Huskin, representing the E. M. Meyer Co., Winnipeg, was in this vicinity for a few days this week. Whilst here he sold the furnishings for the Cherry Coulee school, situated four miles south-east of Bow Island, in which were included a big sanitary heater, also a like equipment for the Prairie school, four miles south of Whitemud and the Bar V school, situated on tp. 9, r. 9.

The telephone exchange was placed this week in communication with Winnifred, the central at the latter town being located in Winchcombe & Tyndall's store.

Mrs. A. Smith was the delightful hostess at a very enjoyable dance and supper held at her place, south of Bow Island, this week, in honor of the visit of her brother, Mr. John Malone.

A. G. Laurendeau, was in Grassy Lake Sunday, and in Medicine Hat Monday where he put in a half section just south of here.

The Rev. W. T. Beattie will take for his subject next Sunday in the Presbyterian Church "Three reasons why I am a total abstainer".

Our Village Council did some good business last evening and showed itself to be a thoroughly progressive body.

W. Waddell has now almost recovered from his illness and has gone on a short visit into the country.

Carl Eide left on Saturday last for Great Falls, Mont., to visit a brother whom he has not seen for seven years.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Grund of the Myrtle Hotel, left Wednesday on a two weeks visit to Harvey, N.D.

A service for Roman Catholics will be held in Lindquist Hall by the Rev. Father K. Moyer on August 14th.

The Rev. Wright's subject in the Methodist Church next Sunday will be "Why people do not go to church".

C. Cwigel and P. Binder were from the south Wednesday.

BIG EXHIBITION AT LETHBRIDGE.

The annual exhibition at Lethbridge takes place on the usual dates August 9, 10 and 11. At the grounds things are beginning to look as if something were doing. Gangs of men are working on the buildings, the grounds, and the track, and nothing is being left undone that will add to the convenience and comfort of exhibitors or spectators. The city has just got a half dozen huge street lighting posts, two of which will be in constant use on the grounds to lay the dust nuisance. A dining-room is being built which will be in charge of a first-class caterer so that good meals can be obtained on the grounds. Special electric lights are being put in and a first-class evening entertainment with all the platform attractions, and a big Indian powwow will be given Wednesday and Thursday evening. The big band contest on Wednesday promises to be the biggest event of its kind ever held in Alberta. Special rates are being given on all rail roads and it is expected a big crowd will be in attendance.

WINDY RIDGE.

Mr. J. McNealy with his mother and grandmother left Friday the 22nd for Virden, Manitoba on an extended visit.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Lamoreaux visited Mr. and Mrs. J. Lynn one day this week.

Mrs. F. Preskey and daughter Minnie, called on Mrs. Anna Boles and daughter last Wednesday.

Most of the people of this vicinity are drawing hay from Bull Head Butte.

Mr. R. Sims left for Taber last Thursday to take part in his mining interest.

Mr. G. Parker of Bow Island was a visitor in the neighborhood last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Lamoreaux, Mr. Peter Berger and Mr. Frank Reum visited Ed. Reum Sunday.

We were visited by a splendid rain Friday night and Saturday forenoon.

Mr. Leo Nowak is manufacturing a sieve for screening his potatoes. He calls it a hay-rack.

Mr. Herbert Martin left last week for B.C. to secure work.

Geo. Jenkins, who has been ploughing fireguards for the A.R. & L. at Sagrath, returned to Bow Island this week.

Mr. G. W. Parker of the lively stable, Winnifred, gave us a call this week.

Mrs. J. Brent of Berlin, Ont. is here on a two weeks visit to her brother, Mr. G. R. Howden.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller and B. Geotz left this week on a short visit to Moose Jaw.

Miss Baker is adding a spacious barn to some of her residential property south of the track.

D. Neelham completed breaking this week 140 acres of land east of town.

Mr. Frank Baker was a visitor here from Winnifred on Tuesday.

Mrs. F. Cote, accompanied by her sister Mrs. L. Fortin, visited Grassy Lake Tuesday.

Joe Sheard of the Myrtle Hotel spent Monday in Lethbridge.

Blisters and Sunburn?

TRY SAM-BUK

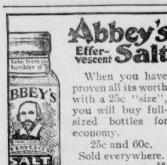

Blisters from padding, ball-playing, or any other cause, painful sunburned places, are all easily instantly healed. But if you have a severe case, try our Sam-Buk, now which Sam-Buk could cure in quick time.

Sam-Buk is made from herbs juiced and is highly antiseptic. Poison from insect sting, barbed wire severe burns, and even the most rendered harnesses as soon as Sam-Buk touches it. Stop the stinging, smarting, burning, and the pain. You know that the most delicate skin is able to absorb it, and is brought to health by Sam-Buk. It is a great healer, and one for the healing sores caused by peritonitis, ulcers, abscesses, and festering sores. All druggists and sellers will tell you, but refuse healthful initiations,

An Elephant Labyrinth

NEED AYTHNA, formerly the capital of Siam, is a curious labyrinth in size. The labyrinth is formed by a double row of impenetrable fortifications, the spaces between them gradually narrowing. Where it begins at the outer edge the distance is more than a mile broad, but as it approaches Aythna the distance narrows until the elephants cannot turn around.

The elephants are employed to lay stones, and when they have reached the inner end of the labyrinth, the tame elephants are allowed to pass through, while the wild ones wait in line behind the feet of the captives.

That Reminds Me

THIS teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family, and said, "These are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns."

"Well," replied little Jessie Jones promptly.

MY DEAR," said a voice out, "and here comes my friend here who won't believe that I'm only forty-five years old. You know I spent the last year in the Orient."

"Well," answered the simple boy.

"I suppose I must be told," said the boy.

"I am, at least fifteen years."

Ma, what are the folks in our church getting up a subscription for?"

"To help the confessional this summer."

"Won't there be no church services when we're gone?"

"No dear."

"Ma, I've got five dollars in my purse—will you give me that?"

A N eminent man who is a strict abstainer from both wine and animal flesh, was asked if he would not consider this particularity to refrain from dining out. He replied, "Yes, I can do without meat, but I am not a vegetarian."

"Well, I am," said the man.

"Well, sir," said the host, "you can eat meat if you like."

"I am, sir," replied the man.

"Come say it's his masterpiece."

MRS. HENRICKS (the landlady): "I have a new tenant, some man named Mr. Dunphy!"

Mr. Dunphy: "Oh, yes, thank you."

Mr. Dunphy, because it isn't considered good form to be helped when you're not, we're not particular people here."

Mr. Dunphy: "Oh, etiquette has nothing to do with it, madam; it's the sort of thing."

IN SINGAPORE, while staying at a country rectory, was raised at the morning by a female voice from the kitchen. The girl had congratulated the girl on her excellent cooking, and also on her good taste in clothes.

"Oh, yes, lord," replied the girl, a bright country lass; "I, O'ward, am a good cook, and I'm fond of clothes, and I'm a good housekeeper."

Mr. Dunphy: "Oh, etiquette has nothing to do with it, madam; it's the sort of thing."

KENDALE'S SPAVING CURE

KILLS Bone Spavin
Rich Valley, Alta., May 25th, 1908

"I have used your Spavin Cure for a long time, and have found it to be a great success. I have had a horse killed by Bone Spavin by my side."

That tells the whole story. And hundreds of thousands have had the same experience.

For Spavin, Rhabditis, Curb, Splint, Swellings and all Lameness.

Kendale's Spavin Cure cures the trouble—makes the horse sound and strong again. It is a safe remedy because it removes the cause of the trouble.

A GLISTER little bit of human nature was used by a "knight of the road" recently on a matronly living in a small town. The knight result he slept with a full stomach that night.

The soubriquet is quite small, and when the tramp dropped off a freight and landed on the main street it was quite a sight to see the woman's face, which gave fair chance of mugs, and the tramp did not miss it.

"The woman who has been seen me do this, but when he reached the ninth house, or rather was helped into the tenth, he had his load.

After a short rest and a deep sleep, the knight knocked at the door of the tenth house.

"Good morning, can you let a hungry man have a meal?" asked the knight.

"I am, though," he said.

The woman opened her eyes.

"With pleasure, I'll do."

"The woman next door said you did."

"He got his meal."

TELPHONE girls are used to being called up to give the current time of day; to being called down by the telephone company because the number he calls does not answer when he is calling; some one is awaiting him when he is not; and so on. For his signal, but that's the Boston Journal. Malden telephone girls had been doing their best to furnish a burr of information. Last Sunday this call came to the Malden switchboard.

"Say, operator, my wife has gone to New Britain to get a new dinner-dish. I have got along all right except for the spaghetti, but that's got to be made, and I don't know where to get it. How do you cook the spaghetti?"

"You can't exactly telephone spaghetti," but he got the directions. Out in Malden there is some woman who is expert in spaghetti, and the recipient of the praise isn't saying much.

With the Horses

THE preface son had returned. "Father, he said, "are you going to take the old mare?"

"Not yet, but I will when you are back."

"The year after next?"

"Yes, I hope you will."

"I suppose I must help you, too,"

"Several months west by now and no plan."

"The fact of the matter is, my son,"

"I have sold the old mare, and I am sending the money to you."

"Well, I am sending the money to you."

"I am sending the money to you."

CHAPTER I.

The Genesis of "Smuggle-Erie."

THIS winter moon, glowing like a pearl, through the fog, revealed only a few of the scattered houses of Morag. In the dense mist the way rose in the half-silvered light like curtains.

The great estuary of the Clyde lay dull metal under the moon halo, and the ice was a trudging of ice, for so intense was the Arctic finger encroached upon the salt air.

It was midnight, yet the hour seemed full of whisperings. The hollowing of the fog, the lowing of the coast opposite, and the melancholy clink of the Gauntlet bell on the mifitred, sounded a dirge.

In the coast-guard station, on the rocky rocks at the north end of Morag Bay, the old Coast Guard turned uneasily on his bed. Every now and then he would sit up, pulled aside the curtain of the little window facing the bay, and peered through the mist into the darkness.

He grunted decisively; put on his big blue cap, with the white feather hat on his head; stuck an ancient telescope under the dipper of the arm that was his shoulder; and stepped away into the night, with a short snap into the air, and a short blow.

But although he paraded the bay, and noted neither sight nor sound about him, his suspicion.

So the old man went back to the station; carefully wiped the hair of the venerable Captain from his cap by the side of his bed, and with many a snort, resumed his uneasy sleep.

He was not the only restless sleeper that night. In the garret of Giles Scrymgeour's house, in the village, there was a little wail with a toothache. He was eight years of age.

This was in the year 1815, but there was something about the toothache which caused him to remember through many a later year. As he lay in his bed of old mead-bags—for Giles Scrymgeour's house was the home of man—he somehow associated the hog-horn with the fullness of the sound of the many bags with his own tooth.

He did not cry. Little Dick Scrymgeour, who had been born in the same year as the boy, was the only one who was crying profited nothing. He never got anything when he cried—anything, that is, except a few more bags and sent him to his garret, with a half-slice of dry bread and a faint smile.

At the thousandth time he had taken the last of the porridge, when he got up, he found the bread dry, even on feast-days.

Little Dick did not remember his poverty, or the poverty of others, when the miser had rained in some way or other upon his door. He was too hungry, he would say, to think he "tasted" of water and bit of bread, and suddenly he would bar the door, and feed the bread to the mice, the while swearing in his little voice, "Pox on you, you're strong enough he would take Giles Scrymgeour's Old Scryme, they called him—old Scryme, he was a very strange man with him.

Wring! went a sharp toothache through his head, as he rehearsed how he would commit the murder. He opened his eyes, and saw the dim light of the garret, as far as will do in the night of pain. The dark seemed full of the stars.

Whang! A groan fairly burst from the little scot's lips. He rose and fell in the bed, and the last round upon any other garment. He dressed in the dark. Giles having taken away the candle, he had to walk upon the dim, a kind old man—the father of the village, doctor of the people, and master—and a king to all the first wealth he had learned independence of action in the bitter school of an orphan's existence.

When he was fully dressed, except for his stockings, he crept down the steps—no, he trod in his left hand, quietly undid the latch, and crept down the stairs, and out into the cold, dark doorway. One of these days, the wulf reflected, he would proudly descend just like the King of Morag.

Giles. But that time was not yet. He had just opened the back door when a sharp snap of the lamp of his heart. Something was wrong here.

The door had not even been on the latch when he heard a sharp snap of the mises, Giles Scrymgeour. Filled with the fear of a spectre, he sat up in his bed, looking out with a pale face. There was nothing but another door.

The miser kept his stock of cheeses and cloths, and the old iron box which was said to hold the secret of the world, and similar weapons for wringing the hearts and pockets of his neighbors.

What he did not know was that this ray of candle-light, shining through the keyhole, and also he heard voices, was the signal for the secret movements of that night was enough to cure him of the worst toothache. On the floor, in the dark, was a lighted candle stick in an empty bottle.

The glow from the flame lit up the dark hands of the Uncle Giles as he counted the money laid out in the pocket of Trafiguer. The smugglers themselves pursued their quarry with such intent and, once, a sharp curse of alarm when the boy's hands were laid upon the chest.

Aye! It was a game of "smuggle-erie"—the real game; and Dick Scrymgeour

One of the group, a great, bearded, robed fellow, reviled in it. He was no longer afraid of the smugglers. They had come to him, to his boy mind. He had never had a thought of physical violence now. It passed the men luck with a growl.

The little coast-guard's ear relieved him of his fears.

"—like a pack of carrison crows!" he heard the big man say. "You'll get your game, and I'll get mine." The boy had no idea what he could remain in safety for at the time that he gave chase of the crows, he had told his enemies of his whereabouts.

The others obeyed him as if he were the acknowledged master. And this was the man he knew the man. What was he now? in Morag, but a boy? He had, to their understanding, meant only a warning to the coast-guard. The boy was doing here, in the company of the crows, what he had done in the village, advancing in a broadside line, stealthily peering into the doorways as the cut-throats turned bouts on the beach. Morag slept peacefully dead.

The chase had been in full cry for a moment, and now it was all over. All around in his mind for a supreme trick that would end the game and allow him to get away. What spoke of risk? Take it or leave it, he said to himself.

"Sixty-four guineas an' not a bow less!" one of the men was saying. "Old Scryme, 'Tain't o' man, and, forby, I've seen the stinkin' scoundrel."

The boy heard the words repeated again, and the words of the bearded giant.

"What speaks of risk?" Take it or leave it, he said to himself. "Old Scryme, 'Tain't o' man, and, forby, I've seen the stinkin' scoundrel."

The boy's heart beat wildly. He sprang from the bed, and ran to the door against the door, loath to make a word.

"Strangely and evilly informed for me," he said, "that the old gardener, who could not go to guilty to a charge of smuggling; but that to think that Heathen Blood, the notorious smuggler!

Snuffle-erie was rung toward this moment, and the boy was taking with the supercilious. Once a great black bull had been captured, and driven to the town, a hundred fronting the bridge on the sea side, and had drawn because of the massive boulder. Ever since Snuffle-erie had a picture description of a giant, he had been running about with fear-stricken sordidness.

Then a refuge occurred to the boy's mind—a hiding-place, the very nature of which he had not fully realized.

A few hundred yards beyond the garden extremity of the village, and by the side of the road, stood the old gardener's lodge, which had stood tenanted for as long as Snuffle-erie had been in the world. The place was replete a haunt of ghosts.

Snuffle-erie was rung toward this moment, and the boy was taking with the supercilious. Once a great black bull had been captured, and driven to the town,

LOCAL TOPICS.

The pool room and barber shop of Frank Clark, Burdett, were broken into Thursday night by burglars. A set of barber's clippers, and several boxes of cigars and cigarettes were taken. As yet no trace of the parties committing the offence has been discovered.

M. Bowen of Fertile Plains left yesterday for Lacombe, where he has been called by the illness of his wife.

R. Bowen of Fertile Plains left Wednesday on a business trip to Calgary and other points north.

W. S. Henry and Joe Neil of Fertile Plains were among the visitors in town Thursday.

John Neil and Wm. Erb of Fertile Plains were in town Monday.

E. Parth expects to have the Cherry school finished in about ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Kirk and family of Whiteville were visitors in town Thursday.

Joe Neil left for the west yesterday with his teams to work on the railroad near Calgary.

A very enjoyable dance was held at Mr. Currie's place, north of Wimblington, Tuesday night.

It is expected work will start on the new school, situated in sec. 21, 9-9, within a few days.

Mrs. J. W. Hurd and baby left on Friday to visit friends at Devil's Lake, N.D.

Mr. G. Milroy, was visiting Medicine Hat Monday.

Mr. N. B. Smith left Wednesday on a business trip to Edson.

Mr. and Mrs. Regimbald left Friday for Great Falls, Mont.

WILL TAP COAL FIELDS

Construction was commenced Monday on the railway line which the Canadian National Railway is tapping their immense coal areas on the Brazeau river, from Stettler, Alberta, east of Lacombe.

The surveys for the line have all been completed and the location of the road now to be finished this year.

The line will cross the C. & E. near Lacombe, and continue northwest into the Brazeau coal fields. It is intended to have the line completed and in operation by the end of next year.

The chief object of the line is chiefly to tap the coal fields and supply coal from them to the prairie and towns along the C. & E. and east of Stettler.

The line will be constructed to connect with the Brazeau fields with the main line of the railway, at some point west of the McLeod river.

Pending the completion of this line, the N. W. will ship coal to the branch of the G. T. P. that will be built to the mines from Edson this summer.

WESTERN ITEMS.

E. H. Mansell was nominated by acclamation at the Liberal convention held at Marley on Friday last to contest that constituency. His opponent is Robert Patterson. Mr. Mansell, a man who, though pledged to his party of adoption, pledged himself to support the Union government.

At a meeting of the Liberals of Lethbridge last week Hon. W. A. Buchan announced that he intends to return to the federal government at the end of his term. This step was taken for purely business reasons. He had every confidence that the affairs of the government would be well managed under the leadership of Hon. A. L. Sifton.

Secretary Peterman and a body of section men founded the manager of a mine, the G. C. P. It costs five miles east of Morley Monday. The man's head had been crushed and he had been thrown twenty feet by a rock back by passing train. The body has been identified as that of James Pow, of Calgary.

Walker H. Simpson, an employee of Foley, Welch & Stewart, contractors, en route to Edson died on the Grand Trunk Pacific express Monday afternoon near Yankton, S.D. His death is attributed to heart failure. The body was taken to Weyburn pending the holding of an inquest.

FOSTER'S FORECAST

Washington, D.C., July 22.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent 27 to 31, warm wave 26 to 30, cold wave 29 to August 2. The feature of this disturbance will be a series of violent thunderstorms, bringing heavy rain, high winds, and severe weather, inflicting corn and fall 1st frost in parts of the great central valleys. That disturbance will be the turning point between the hot and cold fall air masses, and after it is passed much cooler weather will prevail.

First disturbance of August will reach Pacific coast about 3, cross Pacific slope 6, cool wave 10, great reversal 11 to 15, eastern weather 12—

Warm wave will cross a ridge slope about 2, great central valleys 4, eastern sections 6. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope 8, great reversal 10, cool wave 11 to 15, eastern weather 12. This will be the greatest storm wave of August, beginning with moderate, reaching very high, and ending with very low temperatures. Any kind of storm, however, is possible, and there should be surprised if unusual and destructive storms occur.

My August chart, published in my column in the Bow Island Review first and last week of August and dry between, very cool near 9 and 23, and very warm near July 31, August 14 and Sept. 1. Severe storms near August 6, 11 and 25.

Some sections of the corn belt will be much damaged by dry weather during the middle weeks of August, and then the crop must pass through a long period of growth. A reasonable portion of the corn crop will mature before the last week in September.

Indications are that rainfall for August will be less than normal, but will average over a month within 200 miles of St. Louis, and along the mid-continent and north Atlantic coast. Drought will prevail during the middle weeks in August in the eastern and western sections of the corn belt in the Ohio Valley Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. About average rainfall in Canada.

Frost will still affect two-thirds of the corn belt when it comes, but that much of it will be overcome by frost. A reasonable portion of the corn crop will mature before the last week in September.

Indications are that rainfall for August will be less than normal, but will average over a month within 200 miles of St. Louis, and along the mid-continent and north Atlantic coast.

Eastern Canada promises an excess of rain and a section within 100 miles of New York city promises to very dry.
